Child care available here starting in May

After years of planning and months of construction, the on-campus daycare center will open its doors for children of faculty, staff and students on May 13.

The center, located north of the the College Park Office Building, will provide 72 spaces for children of University staff and students.

A total of 72 spaces are available for children of faculty, staff and students to be assigned by lottery.

To provide an equal opportunity for all families interested, a lottery system will be used to fill the spots, according to Eric Dubow, a member of the Child Care Task Force that oversaw the organization of the section for children of faculty, staff and students.

Lottery applications are available by writing or visiting Donna Wittwer, benefits manager, at 100 College Park Office Building or calling 2-2113. Applications must be completed and returned to Human Resources by 5 p.m. April 5.

The lottery will be conducted on April 8 and all entrants will be notified of their status that week, Dubow said. Those who are selected will be asked to meet with a representative from the facility and asked for a commitment within the week.

Families whose names are not selected in the lottery will be placed on a waiting list and notified when a space opens that matches their needs.

Based on the response to a needs assessment conducted about two years ago, two-thirds of the spaces have been set aside for children of faculty and administrative and classified staff, Dubow said. One-third of the spaces will be for children of students.

The spaces will be assigned as follows, based on federally mandated daycare ratios:

- 10 spaces for infants aged 6 weeks-18 months;
- 14 spaces for toddlers aged 18-24 months;
- 14 spaces for toddlers aged 24-36 months;

Ready to take your call

President Sidney Ribeau joined members of classified staff in helping with the WBGU-TV March membership campaign last week. The staff took pledges from the phones and Ribeau went on-camera with public relations director Tim Smith to talk about some of the benefits of public broadcasting.

Senate chair looks at successes and frustrations

There was good news and bad news discussed during last week's meeting of Faculty Senate.

The good news is that the Ohio Universities Faculty Salary Survey conducted by the University of Akron ranks Bowling Green second highest in the percentage of salary increases given to continuing faculty in 1995-96.

The bad news is that faculty still feel "demoralized" because of several unresolved issues, some of which are not salary related, said Fiona MacKinnon-Slaney, senate chair.

"Retirements without replacements are decimating our academic departments," she said in a strongly worded address. "Some departments are reduced by as much as 50 percent of their faculty ... students are suffering and our faculty are frustrated."

She noted that while recent market adjustments in salary were provided for administrative staff as well as an increase for the football coach "there has been no discussion of equity for faculty."

"Where is an advocate for faculty on this campus?" she asked. She noted that inequities in the salaries between male and female faculty pointed out in a senate-sponsored report have still not been addressed.

MacKinnon-Slaney made reference to rumors flying about campus that she said should be addressed by the administration, including a rumor that plans are underway to discontinue the Early Retirement Incentive Program even though a committee has only recently been formed to take a closer look at it. Les Barber, speaking on behalf of the president, said that to the best of his knowledge the rumor is untrue. No such plans are in the works.

Despite her concerns, MacKinnon-

Slaney noted that one project initiated by Faculty Senate last year to address low faculty morale, the Building Community Project, has succeeded beyond all expectations. "We have tried to collaborate and to set the tone for positive interactions and the Building Community Project has been a great success."

Senate took another step to assist a segment of faculty last Tuesday by passing a resolution seeking instructional fee waivers for part-time faculty. If the proposal is approved by the University's Board of Trustees, part-time faculty who have taught for at least two consecutive semesters would be eligible for the same tuition benefits as part-time classified staff.

A resolution revising the pregnancy and family care leave policy was postponed pending approval from the University legal counsel.

Children's author to receive degree

Toledo author Jan Wahl will receive an honorary doctor of letters degree from the University on Friday (March 15). President Sidney Ribeau will confer the degree at 10:30 a.m. in the Gish Film Theater.

Jan Wahl

Following the ceremony Wahl will give a presentation about the development of silent film. The presentation will include the showing of Italian, English and French films from 1908 as well as a "trick" film from his collection.

The author will be available to sign autographs from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Friday morning in the Gish Film Theater.

In addition to being the award-winning author of more than 100 books for children, Wahl is a film historian, archivist and collector.

His library includes films from 1893 to post World War II and boasts more than 1,500 titles. His literary merits have earned him a number of writing awards including the Christopher Medal, Redbook Award and Parents' Choice Award. He is a frequent speaker at library and writing conventions as well as in classrooms and writing workshops.

In conjunction with the event, an exhibit about Wahl and his works will be on display on the first floor of Jerome Library by the circulation desk.

Grad students eligible for new award

Two new awards are being offered by Graduate Student Senate to recognize the work of graduate students who provide service to the University in non-teaching roles.

The Administrative/Research Assistant Award recognizes the contribution of an administrative assistant and research assistant who has demonstrated innovation and initiative on the job, outstanding performance in their duties and a positive contribution to the BGSU community.

Two cash awards of $250 each will be given to one research assistant and one administrative assistant.

Eligible students may be nominated by any supervisor, co-worker or fellow student. Two letters of recommendation are required for each nomination, including one from the nominee's supervisor. Nomination forms are available in the Graduate Student Senate office, 707 Administration Building.

Nominations will be accepted until 5 p.m. March 22. The awards will be presented along with the Charles E. Shanklin Award for Research Excellence on May 3.

Speaker to offer presentation on bats

An expert on bats will offer his views on the underappreciated creatures in a lecture sponsored by the Center for Environmental Programs and the Environmental Action Group.

Allen Kurta, an associate professor of biology at Eastern Michigan University, will present an illustrated program on bats at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 13, 1996 in 95 Overman Hall.

In his presentation, Kurta will discuss the many ways that bats are beneficial to man, including their efficiency in controlling the insect population. A colony of 50,000 bats will consume as many as 300 million insects in one night. They also clean the air and save farmers millions of dollars by sweeping up pesky insects.

Campus daycare

• 34 spaces for preschoolers aged 3-5 years. The preschool group will be broken up into two classrooms with 17 children each.

The cost for families will be based on the ages and number of children enrolled as well as the times needed for care. Dubow said the cost is "competitive" with other daycare centers in the area. Specific information will be provided in a packet given to all who apply.

The center will be operated by WSOS Community Action Inc., a private, non-profit corporation which also provides a Head Start program for pre-kindergarten children in the area. The Head Start students are expected to begin their classes at the center some time this month.

For additional information contact Wittwer at 2-2113.

Memos

ASC seeks nominees for membership

Ballots have been sent to all administrative staff members soliciting nominations for membership on Administrative Staff Council.

ASC represents administrative staff members by promoting their general welfare, seeking professional development opportunities, maintaining communication among staff members and reviewing, initiating and making recommendations on institutional policies. Council members are elected to serve three-year terms.

Representatives will be elected to fill 18 vacant seats in the following areas: academic affairs (4), operations (1), planning and budgeting (2), president's area (4), student affairs (4) and University relations (3).

Nomination ballots should be returned to Gail McRoberts, ASC secretary, graduate college, 120 McFall Center by Friday March 15.

Classified Staff accept nominations

Classified staff are encouraged to submit self nominations for positions on Classified Staff Council for the 1996-97 academic year.

Positions are open for representatives from the following areas: planning and budgeting (a three-year term), auxiliary support services — food (a three-year term), auxiliary support services — food (a one-year unexpired term), operations (two three-year terms), academic affairs (two three-year terms), student affairs (a two-year term), University relations (a three-year term), part-time staff (a one-year unexpired term).

Nominations are due by April 1. Ballots will be mailed to all classified staff on April 18 for return by April 30.

Suggestions wanted by task force

The Building Community Task Force invites faculty, staff and students to send comments and suggestions on "Focus on February" discussion group themes by e-mail to community@mailserver.bgsu.edu or by campus mail to The Task Force, c/o President's Office, 220 McFall Center.

The deadline for comments and suggestions to be included in the task force's final report to the president is Friday (March 15).

Spirit Day ideas welcomed

In what ways could the University community celebrate school spirit?

The Building Community Task Force is seeking ideas on this subject as preparations for the next two "Spirit Days" — March 29 and April 26 — are being planned.

Send any suggestions and comments to community@mailserver.bgsu.edu

Employee assistance offered to staff

Help is available for employees with personal problems through programs provided by Harbor Employee Assistance.

Faculty and staff can learn more about these programs at one of two information sessions scheduled for Wednesday (March 13).

Staff from Harbor Employee Assistance will be offering the sessions from 9:30-10 a.m. and repeated from 2-2:30 p.m. Both will be held in the Personnel Training/Conference Center in the College Park Office Building.

Call Yolanda Patton at 2-8421 to register.

Help Desk pros to meet at BGSU

The Western Lakes-Toledo Chapter of the Help Desk Institute will be holding its monthly meeting from noon to 2 p.m. on Wednesday (March 13) in two rooms in Hayes Hall.

Faculty and staff are welcome to bring their meals and join seminar participants for lunch in 203 Hayes Hall. At 1 p.m. attendees will proceed to 126 Hayes Hall for the seminar.

The Western Lakes-Toledo Chapter of HDI provides a forum for the exchange of information for customer support, help desk and call center professionals in the northwest Ohio and southeast Michigan areas.

This month's meeting will feature a seminar with some hands-on experience on "Customer Service Via the Internet."

For further information, contact Duane Whitmire at 2-2927 or e-mail him at whitmire@bgsu.edu.

Cancer prevention information offered

Faculty and staff can find out what cancers can be prevented and detected during a "Brown Bag Lunch" from noon to 1 p.m. March 20 in the Personnel Training/Conference Room, College Park Office Building.

James Kettinger, staff physician for Student Health Services, will be providing information on screenings and self examinations that can detect cancer at an early stage when treatment is more likely to be successful.

To register call Yolanda Patton at 2-8421.

Services available for adult learners

Faculty and staff who are thinking about taking classes can get a helping hand from the Adult Learner Services and Evening Credit programs on campus.

The programs can help assess interests, explore ideas, obtain practical information and develop plans for additional education.

These and other details will be explained in a "Brown Bag Lunch" scheduled for noon-1 p.m. March 19 in the Personnel Training/Conference Center, College Park Office Building.

To register call Yolanda Patton at 2-8421.

Off-campus card available at library

Faculty performing research who might need a card for borrowing privileges at the University of Michigan libraries can now purchase one through BGSU's Libraries and Learning Resources.

The BGSU libraries will be underwriting a great portion of the cost, which is normally $250 for individuals. Please notify Sharon Morgart at 2-2856 by March 15 if interested.

Music hooks Toledo youngsters into college preparation

Each Wednesday, two University vans travel to Toledo and return to campus with a group of high school and junior high students.

The second floor of Moore Musical Arts Center quickly fills with the sounds of music, laughter and chatter as the students take part in a program called Music Plus.

"Wednesday is the best day of the week," said Anna Belle Bognar, an associate professor of music education and associate director of Music Plus.

For the past nine years, she and director Victor Ellsworth, have been volunteering their time to give minority and low-income students an opportunity to study music and get an up-close view of University life. Ellsworth, an associate professor of music education, founded the program.

"Everybody deserves an opportunity if they have the ambition and enthusiasm to learn, regardless of their background," he said.

It was this philosophy that led him to create Music Plus. After four difficult "pilot years," as Bognar laughingly refers to them, the two music faculty finally struck on the format that has been working successfully the past five years.

The program operates entirely on donations from public and private sources.

Although "music is the hook to get kids in (to the program), the hidden agenda is to get them thinking about going to college," Ellsworth said. That is why a key element of Music Plus is bringing the students to the University rather than taking the program to them. "It allows them to visualize themselves in college," Bognar explained.

All of the 26 students enrolled in Music Plus receive individual lessons on the instrument of their choice. They also all take self-guided keyboard classes to strengthen their musicianship skills which "helps them learn efficient learning strategies and builds self-confidence," Bognar said.

In addition to music lessons, the students take part in a weekly visit to a musical or theatrical performance, art show or other campus cultural event. A recent Wednesday found the group enjoying a basketball game in Anderson Arena.

LaToya Pitts, a freshman at Toledo's Scott High School, has been in Music Plus a little over two years. "It's challenging me. I learn something new every week," she said. She plays trumpet and sings in her school choir, and plans to become a music teacher.

Classes are taught by volunteer graduate and undergraduate music majors, overseen by Ellsworth and Bognar. "The University students take ownership of their students. There's a real link between the University kids and the Toledo kids. The education goes both ways," Ellsworth said.

Bognar said the program also helps forge a new relationship between college faculty and the student teachers. "It gives us a chance to work together as colleagues, which is beneficial to us all," she said.

Heather Fiscus, a junior majoring in music education, said teaching students in Music Plus allowed her to learn that she "had to be flexible. I've also learned how to use many ways to teach students the same idea."

Fiscus has added a new element to Music Plus by teaching the students computer skills to make use of software designed to sharpen their note-reading and ear-training abilities.

Music Plus students are not chosen primarily for their musical ability. Ellsworth said he looks instead for good citizenship and "aggressive learners."

He works with Toledo Public Schools' Horizon Project for gifted and talented students and compiles a short list of those who scored well on standardized tests. Next he consults with the sixth-grade general music teachers in the six elementaries in the Jones Junior High School district to make his final selection and he visits those students at their schools.

Those who enroll in Music Plus attend a week-long day camp at the University the summer between their sixth and seventh grade year.

Ellsworth also visits the students at home and meets their parents "so they can put a face to the program." He will often visit them at home several more times over the years they remain in Music Plus, often through high school.

Many of the participants do not plan to become musicians or music teachers, but whatever they choose to study, the Music Plus experience is designed to "enable them to compete fairly in a university situation," Ellsworth said. Of those who do go on, most will be the first in their families to go to college, Bognar said.

A highlight of the year is Shadow Night, the last session of the season, when parents are brought to Bowling Green to watch their children's music classes and see them perform in a recital. Bognar said videos of these evenings reveal the delight and pride on the parents' faces as they see what their children have achieved.

For the students themselves, the concert is a rewarding experience. Will Terry, a sophomore at Libbey High School who has been in Music Plus for four years, said his first solo recital was a high point for him. Terry is thinking of majoring in business administration in college, and said working with the college students in Music Plus has given him a better sense of what college life is like. — Bonnie Blankinship

Did You Know?

■ The Bowling Green Chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta academic honor society for freshmen was awarded the prestigious Order of the Torch in 1994-95 and 1991-92. This honor is given to only two or three of the 200 chapters each year. The recipient chapter is eligible after three years to receive the recognition again.

■ A computer screen saver with the "Building Community" logo is available free to faculty, staff and students by sending e-mail to community@mailserver.bgsu.edu. The application was made by Charles Spontelli, visual communication technology, with help from students. It makes use of a design created by Lee Florio-Thompson, instructional media services.

Astronomer to offer Phi Beta Kappa lecture

A leading astronomer and physicist will present a public lecture on "Cosmic Evolution: the Origins of Matter and Life" at 8 p.m. on Monday (March 18) at the planetarium.

Eric J. Chaisson, director of the Wright Center for Innovative Science Education at Tufts University, will visit the University on March 18-19 as part of the Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program.

Chaisson is a research professor of physics and education at Tufts, an associate of the Harvard College Observatory and co-director of the MIT Space Grant Consortium.

He has written a number of books, including Cosmic Dawn which won the Phi Beta Kappa Award in Science, the American Institute of Physics Award and a National Book Award nomination for distinguished science writing.

Chaisson will also present a public discussion of "The Role of Visualization in Science Education" at 11 a.m. Tuesday (March 19) in 106 Overman Hall and a physics-astronomy department colloquium on "Complexity in Nature" intended for scientists at 4 p.m. in 106 Overman Hall.

He will meet with two astronomy classes to discuss the Hubble Space Telescope and "The Fate of the Universe" and he has been invited to attend the University Planetarium program.

Students hosting largest philanthropy with this weekend's dance marathon

About 200 students will take to the floor for 32 hours at the Student Recreation Center this weekend.

For the first time, the University is host to a traditional dance marathon in support of the Children's Miracle Network. The event raises money for area children suffering from diseases such as leukemia, cancer and muscular dystrophy.

Festivities will kick-off at 10 a.m. Saturday (March 16) with a motivational speaker who will prepare the dancers for the challenging task ahead of them. Other activities during the marathon include band performances, a lip sync contest and theme hours in which one type of music is played, such as country, reggae or rock 'n' roll. The dancers will take meal and restroom breaks throughout the event.

Spaces are still available for students to participate in the event. For more information call 2-0530. Those who would like to support the event but don't want to dance, can send a check, made out to Dance Marathon, to BGSU CMN Dance Marathon, 113 College Park, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio 43403.
